

Want to be a Master of Wine?

16 Apr 2009 by Jancis Robinson

Are you intrigued by the Master of Wine qualification and want to know more about exactly what is involved? Or are you simply intrigued by our very own Julia Harding MW?

To find out more about either or both you could do worse than sign up for the MW Master Class, the open day of the Institute of Masters of Wine, which will be held in central London on Monday 11 May, just before the London International Wine Fair to be held at Excel 12-14 May. It is aimed at wine professionals based anywhere in the world who are considering pursuing the Master of Wine education programme.

The day will include a six- wine, MW- style tutored tasting workshop, organised and conducted by Julia and new Master of Wine Jo Ahearn of Marks & Spencer, and a debate and discussion on current issues. Participants will be provided with information material and a registration form for the education programme.
