

London charity fine- wine dinner back to 1952

13 Aug 2010 by Jancis Robinson

On 16 September Purple pager François Feuillat is organising a dinner featuring some very fine wines in the private room at Le Café Anglais, London W2, to raise funds for the hugely worthwhile Cambodian Children's Fund.

Our FT colleague chef- proprietor Rowley Leigh, a serious wine buff himself, is putting together a delectable menu to match clarets going back to 1952, as well as some top-quality dry, off- dry and sweet whites back to 1964 and a rare 19th- century madeira. Places are strictly limited, so if you are interested, please contact François to book your place as soon as you can. I have seen his cellar and can attest to its fine condition in terms of temperature and humidity.

Scott Neeson, founder of the Cambodian Children's Fund, who took this photograph (it was his passion for photography that led him to discover the poverty that prevails there), and Michael Armitage, its UK representative (and organiser of this wine weekend), will both be there.

See here for a moving video of the CCF's work.
