Australia	South Australia	Barossa Valley			Rob Gibson	Viticulturist			Shiraz	?		Rob Gibson, better known as 'gibbo' locally. He is the dirtman, a name given to him by those who studied viticulture at Roseworthy College. Rob is described as having an impressively large mustache, relaxed personality and the kind of smile that can only come from a life spent pursuing one's passions. Vines planted around the 1860s are his old vines most cherished, his young vines are from 1911. Think of the history back when the first old vines were planted, Queen Victoria was still on the throne and Abraham Lincoln was president of the USA. The wines smell and taste of this history, and thankfully Rob did not follow the trend of pulling out old vines for replacing them by more high yielding young vines.	Tim Eichelberger

Australia	South Australia	Barossa Valley	Watunga Road Vineyard	Handpicked Wines	Andrew Butler	Senior Viticulturist	1972-1978	50+	Shiraz, Grenache	12.00		Named by the traditional stewards of the Adelaide plains - the Kaurna Aboriginal peoples - "Watunga" translates to "agreed place". These vines have weathered floods, storms, droughts, and extreme conditions of all sorts to survive the last few decades in this rugged land. Recently purchased by Handpicked Wines, the new owners are bringing this vineyard back to life with techniques such as layering, biodynamic practices, and inoculation of wanted microbes to invest in a healthy soil microbiome. Australia	South Australia	McLaren Vale	Jenery Block 6 Shiraz						Shiraz	1.40		Planted in July and August 1892 by Herbert and Frederick Kay with vine cuttings purchased from Thomas Hardy's neighbouring vineyard. Block 6 has an eastern aspect with gentle undulations. Soils are quite shallow and vary from gravelly alluvial sand loams, red loam and small sections of heavy clay. The underlying geology is classified as 'south main sands' comprising layers of glauconite, limestone, calcareous sandstone and siltstone. Block 6 was dry grown until 1893. Limited irrigation was then introduced using a soaker hose. In spring 1991 a full drip-irrigation system was installed.

Brazil	Campanha Gaúcha	Santana do Livramento	Tannat Vinhas Velhas	Mioio Wine Group	Antonio Santin, Professor Olmo and Professor Daudt	Founding planter, supporters of the project and of Brazilian Wine Development	1976	46	Tannat	4.00		Historically, Serra Gaúcha was the only commonly regarded wine region in Brazil. Campanha Gaúcha on the southern border with Uruguay was reserved for livestock grazing as it was believed to be poor for the growth of wine grapes. However, in the 1960's a young researcher named Carlos Daudt had strong conviction that the region could produce wines of quality. As he attended UC Davis, he gained the support of Professor Olmo in this project. Later a student of his, Antonio Santin, made the dream a reality. These vineyards demonstrated that Brazilian terroir can be expressed through numerous crops (wine, grazing, other food crops) in this region - so the whole dinner can be paired together. Campanha Gaúcha is now one of 16 Brazilian PGI's.	IC Kunz
Bulgaria	Pazardzhik Province	Karabunar			Velichka and Michael Zahre, Nikolay Kovachev	Owners / Winemakers, Vineyard Manager	1970	52	Cabernet Sauvignon		Warm and dry climate, dry farmed. Stone, sand, and clay soils have a high water-holding capacity. Good air flow prevents disease risk. Walnuts and Cherry Trees surround the vines.	The Zahre's make their wine in neighboring Germany at their winery in Flörsheim-Dalheim along with wines from their Rheinhessen Vineyards. They see no borders in their wines and believe their wines are European rather than German or Bulgarian. The vines of this region have somewhat sunk into oblivion following the collapse of the Communist regime as they were returned to their original owners. The Zahre's and Kovachev are making a great effort to find and save what they can.	Deisslava Lyapova

The Lenko family were the first in the area to brave planting vitis vinifera in this cold region in Ontario. At the time, Concord was planted for juice, jellies, and table grapes. It is likely the Chardonnay was grown for these products initially, until 1975 when the Lenkos were approached by a local winemaker to produce a wine. They began to win accolades, and although they no longer produce the wine within the family, they still tend to the vines.	O'Sullivan, L
Chile	Colchagua Valley	Alpata	Quijada	Vña Carmen	Don Juan Quijada	Founder, Current family owners/growers	1958	64	Semillon			The Chilean wine industry has gone through several complicated shifts in direction in its history. Early colonial heritage vineyards were interplanted with international varieties during a French period of influence. Haciendas were broken into smaller plots during the agrarian reforms in the 1950's. Today, organizations such as VIGNO, MOV, and brands like Vña Carmen are championing old vines and the Chilean Wine industry. Quijada Semillon is an important voice in the movement as it is a family run vineyard acquired during the reforms that honors heritage and social justice.	Chris Howard

Chile		Maule Valley	Santa Rosa de Lavaderos	Santa Rosa de Lavaderos Estate	Oscar Bustamante and Modesta Urcelay	Farmers	Before 1900	120+	Cabernet Sauvignon, Pais	9 (2 Cab, 7 Pais)		Oscar and Modesta purchased the Santa Rosa de Lavaderos Estate in 1939. It had an estate with a sprawling colonial hacienda built in 1870. The name "Lavaderos" comes from the fact it used to be an ancient Inca gold washing facility. They farmed organically and instilled an importance on biodiversity as it is surrounded by orchards and natural woodlands along with annual crops. They created a community around their workers to support their well being. They sold these grapes to major Chilean wineries that played a role in continuing education in viticulture. Today, Vña Carmen partners with the vineyard to make Cabernet.	Peter McRostie

France	Languedoc	Limoux	Le Jardin						Mauzac		Ancient soil filled with mica, quartz, feldspar and roman relics. Biodiversity: Thyme, sweet pea, clover, rosemary, weeds allowed, small mammals, boar, deer etc.	Archival records in Carcassonne dating back to 1544 note production of sparkling wine made with the Mauzac variety meaning sparkling wine was made here before it was common practice in Champagne! There were once 9000 ha planted in France with hundreds of genetic strains. Now around 1700 ha made up 7 strains exist. To interplant this vineyard, 4000 vines were grafted from the Limoux conservatory of historic clones. This parcel is likely the most diverse plot of Mauzac existing today. Chateau Rives-Blanches is working to produce wines reminiscent of times past that use their diversity to create resilience to climate change.	Panim, C

France	Languedoc-Roussillon	Fitou		Domaine Jones	Katie Jones	Owner			Liedoner Pelut			Liedoner Pelut, known as the hairy Grenache. A rare variety prone to infection and rot. This slow ripening variety is a risk to grow, quite the challenge. By the EU, many of the Liedoner Pelut vines were pulled out as it was not in the AOP regulations of Fitou, it may not be used in the wines to be labelled as AOP Fitou. Liedoner Pelut was a higher risk, with lower reward, not something most wineries would be interested in. Nevertheless, these vines have surprisingly survived the roaring 80s and still produce grapes to make a mono-cépage wine.	Fenwick C

In 2012, the vineyard at Sarracachies was designated a historical monument by the French Government - the only vineyard in France to be given this status. In 2002, André Dubosc created a private conservatory to study these 21 varieties. The last two Tardif vines found here have been propagated to produce 3,000 more vines, which are well equip to handle our changing climate. Dubosc's conservatory includes the better known varieties of the local AOCs as well as eight ancestral varieties and the 22 wild vines from the region. Making it the largest conservatory of its type in the world. He is also credited for the savior of Manseng Noir after it had dwindled down to one vine.	Hilary McGrath

It is situated closeby the village Mád. The castle estate Regéc-Tállya first planted vines here mid 17th century, to be quite exact in the year 1670. Juh means sheep in Hungarian, and Juhár or Juhász refers to shepherd in old Hungarian. This was not a name chosen accidentally, these shepherds actually cultivated their own vines. Later in history of this vineyard, wealthy families took over and there was even a relation to the Habsburgs. Gratitude was expressed, and these vines became free of taxes. After the freedom was of the Rákóczi, the Traudsons and Orczy families became owners of the plot. Orczy donated several parcels of the vineyard to local peasants in the 18th century. Only to eventually fall in the hands of Dénes Szarka, who saw the potential in the vineyard and now makes the wines here. Since the 70s, the vines were trained under the cordon method.	Gergely Ripka

Hungary	Tokaji		Teleki Vineyard	Bott Winery			1964	58	Furmint, Hárslevelű			History of this vineyard dates back to the 12th century. King Coloman the Learned had a cellar in Tarcal, the slopes between Tarcal and Tokaj were always well appreciated. It also is the steepest and highest part of Tokaj. Teleki vineyard is named after the Hungarian word for united plots, Telek. Some say that Teleki vineyard upholds one of the oldest terroirs of Tokaj.	Gergely Ripka
Italy	Campania	Fallerno del Massico		Cantina Papa				9-110	Primitivo		Ungrafted	Riserva Campantuano is made from those vines, it shows significantly more intensity and alcohol, bearing a whopping 16% ABV. 6000 vines, growing on sandy volcanic silt soil, this offers the winemaker to make 3350 bottles.

At 300 metres above the coast, we find centuries old, ungrafted, pre-Phylloxera vines. Monuments of nature they call these vines. Luigi Reale of Azienda Agricola Reale makes wine from these gnarly vines under the name Borgo di Gete, classified as IGT Coll di Salerno Rosso. With a majority of Tintore, it shows a quality somewhat similar to Aglianico. Deep in colour, expressive and very aromatic of dense black fruit.	Caserta A
Italy	Lazio	Southern Lazio	Carlano Vineyard	Aurete			1840	182	Rasato Nero, Cesanese, Reale Bianco			The grapes grown in this vineyard are extremely rare, this particular plot of land is situated right between Mt. Cecubus and Mt. Falerius. The latter of which used to be farmed by Romans for wine, back then labelled as Falernum. History of winemaking here dates back to the 4th century B.C. and was hence filled with vineyards prior to the Romans.	Grunwald S

Italy	Trento	Vignale, Leno Creek Valley	La Vigna del Bepi	Leno Klandestino	Giuseppe Marisa	?	1960s		Nerara, Barbera, Pavana and Schiava mostly	0.24		Leno Klandestino took over the ownership after Giuseppe died in 2020. This is an association with the goal to promote wine tourism, gastronomy and particularly old vineyards. Giuseppe was curley named Bepi by the locals, hence the name Bepi's vineyard. The vineyard is mainly planted with the grape varieties listed, but there are still other black and white varieties left unidentified.	Renato Leol Binati

Trained to crawl up poplar trees.	These Vines have outlasted Phylloxera, the activity of world war and the lack of vineyard management during those times. When they were planted, modern trellising was not available so they were planted alongside poplar trees for support and height. In 2004, the researchers of the Oenological Institute of Conegliano came to the winery to study the vines and take material for testing, and they determined these are the oldest in activity in Italy. Italy	Tuscany	San Miniato	Le Nicchie	Beconcini	Leonardo Beconcini, Eva Bellagamba	Owners		140+	Tempranillo	0.90		A rarity, Tempranillo in Tuscany. This is most likely the result of pilgrims from Italy, walking to Compostella, taking Tempranillo vines back to Rome. Le Nicchie means the fossils, referring to the marine fossils giving off a high limestone content to the soils. It may also mean the quiet places or the small valleys, insinuating something much like the english word for niche. Much like a niche product, this vineyard is a curiosity, very particular and immensely unique.	Bart de Vries

Japan		Koshu Kaido	Single Vine of Koshu	Kagihara-san			1898	124	Koshu	Single Vine	Tanashiki trellising replaced with a tall pergola. Placed outside a personal home. Dusky pink grapes, spidly clustered, bitter flavors.	For centuries, Koshu vines were the only grape in Japan. Story he told, the first vine was brought to Japan in 718 either as a seed with the birds or through a Chinese Buddhist Monk. In the 8th century, thousands of priests flocked to the Daizenji Temple nearby to tend to medicinal grapevines. It is believed it was the only variety until the late 1800's. Now there are more international varieties planted in the area. Koshu is traditionally made as a sweet wine with some added sugar but is otherwise made simply. After 124 years, this vine outdates any other in Japan - and as noted - outdates any human.	Rosemary Mitchell

Portugal	Serra de Estrela	Melo	Quinta do Paul - "The Licence"	Now produced by a local grower - unnamed	General Beja Neves and family	Founding planter				0.30	High altitude 450m vineyard	Planted by General Beja Neves based in Lisbon. Originally intended as basic quality wines for workers and friends. Made in a small winery with two simple large vats. Mixed variety plantation ensured resilience and production even in varying climates and conditions. Was a mixed red and white wine - of pale ruby color. Officially recorded in 1931 when the first organized effort was made but potentially older. The "Licence" this particular sub-parcel contains the oldest vines. The rest of Quinta do Paul date back to a replanting in the 40's as a part of the 7 hectare parcel.	Tiago de Almeida Macena

South Africa	Bredskloof		Gevonden		Ruan Brink	Owner/farmer			Muscad of Alexandria			Beginning in 1900, every new vine planting required documentation. These vines predate that step, however, that rule has discouraged the destruction of any old vineyard because everything is on record for people to see. Of the earliest vineyards on record that still remain, many are muscad. Muscad of Alexandria originally sources from the Nile Valley in Egypt - meaning that this cultivar very well might be the only indigenous variety to Africa. The variety has made this wine controversial to save, but many people are trying to increase the value of the muscad identity.	Jono Le Fleur

South Africa	Swartland		Broom Ridge	Nuwadam Farm	Christ Alheit (aka Butch)	Owner	1974	48	Chenin Blanc	1.20		Dryland farmed, bush vines	The poor and decomposed granite soil of this vineyard, together with the general struggles of old vines, make this vineyard rather difficult to farm. The old name was Nuwadam Vineyard, and is nowadays called Broom Ridge.	Haggie I

South Africa	Citrusdal Mountain Wine of Origin	Skurfburg	Krommenvally		Henk Laing	Grower	1960	62	Chenin Blanc	3.00	Ungrafted, Dry Farmed	Henk Laing was born the year before the Krommenvally vineyard was planted by his father. He and these vines have grown up on this land together. His vines became highly regarded in the 2000's as they were sourced out to respected growers in the area such as Sadie Family and Alheit. Dry farming in an arid and mountainous region produces wines of authenticity and depth.	Etienne Neethling

South Africa	Western Cape	Olifantsrivier	Old Skurfkop		Henk Laing	Farmer	1978	44	Pinotage, Semillon, Hanepoot (Muscat of Alexandria)		Dry red earth with minimal rainfall, drought conditions, very remote landscape far way from other vineyards. Grapes eaten by tortoises that Henk allows because it doesn't effect yield much. Pinotage is small, dense clusters that create a concentrated wine.	Farming at an extreme - lions, leopards, tortoises, even a buffalo attack survival - make this quite a feat of farming for Henk Laing. Remote area poses the difficulty of finding help in farming as it appears Henk does it all solo. Cerina of Cecilia wines makes the pinotage in upright punchons that she punches down a couple of times a day. Low intervention winemaking. Henk is thankful for Carina's interest in the pinotage and her willingness to spend good money to keep the rugged and isolated vineyard alive.	Rob McCulloch
South Africa	Western Cape	Wellington	Optenhorst		Corlea Fourie	Winemaker	1952	70	Chenin Blanc			Wellington was once known for wagon building and repair along the main route north into greater Africa. It then became a hive of activity along the railway towards the mines, as a pit stop for prospectors. The Wellington wine industry recovered from phylloxera with the establishment of a wine co-operative in 1906. Large wholesalers never took hold in this area so Wellington was not pressured to replant old vines. Today it is important to the Bosman family to establish a tight relationship with the workers. They value the workers connection to place and create a supportive environment where everyone can invest in the outcome of the farm and the wines. Many of the workers were born on the farm and one named Johannes Thomas has his own farming project in growing cysanthemum flowers.	Julia Moore

Spain	Penedès	Sant Sadurni d'Anoia	Turó d'en Mota		Josep Mata Capellades	Founder			Xarel·lo		Calcareous with sand silt and clay. Partially shaded from the mediterranean sun.	Josep Mata Capellades made huge leaps in Cava production by leaving behind Chardonnay, and rather, favoring the local threesome of Xarel·lo, Macabeu, and Parellada. He began making brut nature sparkling wine when the local palate preferred sweetness. Recaredo continues to pursue quality with hand disgorgement of cork topped bottles, along with sustainable and ecology focused farming practices.	A Nemeth

USA	California	Contra Costa	Evangelho	Bedrock & PGE	Manuel Evangelho, Jake Neustadt	Previous Owner, Current viticulturist		1890s	130			The epitome of juxtaposition. This contradiction between natural and man-made, history and failed progress, beauty and ugly, you name it. These vines point back towards an older time in Californian history and the narrative of the early Azorean immigrants. Nowdays surrounded by low income neighborhoods as a result of years of boom and bust in the bay area. PG&E owns 70% of the vineyard now and uses it as a barrier to further housing development surrounding its power plant. These vines are own rooted in deep sands, head trained, relatively untouched. Minimal pruning wounds and mechanization. Pests are a huge risk because the urban environment reduces the natural pest resilience due to ecosystem complexity.	Chris Howard

											This block consists of spur pruned, double layered vertical cordon trained Zinfandel, growing on its own roots. It is also located in the heart of the Mokelumne River AVA's west side, just east of the Spenser Ranch/Jessie's Grove property, north of West Turner Road. Another important note is that it is certified organic by the CCOF as well as the Lodi rules for sustainable winemaking.

USA	California	Napa	Stony Hill Vineyard	Stony Hill Vineyard	Frederick and Eleonore McCrea	Founders	1948	74	Riesling	1.50	St. George Rootstocked, Terraced, East Facing Slopes, Volcanic Soil	Frederick and Eleonore McCrea purchased the Stony Hill property in 1943 with very little understanding of winemaking. Through the advice of friends and faculty at UC Davis, they made the decision to plant Riesling, Chardonnay, Gewurztraminer, and Pinot Blanc in 1948. They made their first vintage in 1952 and to this day, Stony Hill is known for white wines of ageability and elegance. Although all the other parcels have since been replanted to another new life, the original Riesling slope remains as the oldest dedicated block of Riesling in the country.	Julia Minnillo
